Description

This late nineteenth-century Art Nouveau period cast iron umbrella stand or stick stand, dating to around 1890, features an ornate floral display.

This antique umbrella stand showcases an appealing white painted circular frame with intricate floral fretwork detail. The stand displays a desirable aged patina throughout and is constructed from sturdy cast iron, presented in a white painted finish. The frame is accentuated with floral and scroll motifs, adding to its charm. Additionally, the removable drip tray makes it ideal for use with wet umbrellas. This fine antique umbrella stand boasts a crisp appearance and fascinating detail, making it a wonderful addition to any entryway.
