Description

Set of 4 Chinese porcelain plates made in the Canton province around 1820-1830, period of Emperor Daoguang. These 4 flat plates are decorated in the center with scenes of concubines for a pair and historical scenes for the larger ones, the margins are typical of the luxurious production of this period, they are painted with the enamels of the famille rose of flowers, butterflies, kites, fruits like pomegranates, bats and other auspicious symbols. In addition, the mystery remains whole for me concerning the character in the last photo, perhaps one of the many characters Shou symbol of longevity. The small plates measure 20cm and the larger 25cm in diameter. Concerning the condition, no restorations, no breakage or cracks, only wear due to stacking over 200 years on the large plates.
