Description

Superstudio, an Italian architectural firm founded by Adolfo Natalini and Cristiano Toraldo di Francia, designed Quaderna in 1970, a series of tables decorated with a black grid. Published by Zanotta, they are composed of a honeycomb panel structure veneered in Print and screen-printed with black squares with a spacing of 3 cm. This motif is found in several Superstudio projects. The desk version presented here forms a "U" with two solid panels constituting the base. Laminate detached in the corners, small repair to be expected on the laminate (see photo of the base), signs of wear on the top.
