gauging hallmark dated 1691 attests that this measure was still in use and was controlled at that date. The capacity of the pitchers used in taverns, inns and various public places had to be controlled by the controllers-gaugers in order to ensure "good measure" for consumers. In good used condition: Repair of the area of the lower attachment of the handle, some scratches and small local crack on the belly. Pitchers from this period are very rare.
