Description

"Bee in Flight" Ring, Emerald, sapphire and rose-cut diamonds Italy, Naples, circa 1950 - Poetic Naturalism Like a breath of precious poetry, this superb Italian ring from the 1950s features a small bee in full flight, delicately perched on a vermeil band (925 silver gilded with fine gold). The bee's body combines two natural gemstones: a green cabochon emerald for the abdomen and a deep blue cushion-cut sapphire for the head. The finely openwork wings are set with rose-cut diamonds, evoking 19th-century naturalist jewelry while infusing it with a modern freshness. A rare and enchanting detail: the bee is mounted on a small mobile ring, which allows it to move slightly to the rhythm of the hand's gestures, as if it were preparing to gracefully take flight. Inside the ring, two hallmarks attest to its
