Description

This remarkable Italian bronze amphora, created in the late 19th to early 20th century, stands as a fine example of Art Nouveau craftsmanship. Expertly cast using the lost wax technique and finished by hand, the piece showcases the delicate artistry and refined aesthetics characteristic of the period.

The amphora is adorned with intricate, naturalistic grapevines that elegantly wrap around its body, laden with fruit. The central scene depicts a delightful, pastoral tableau: children are captured in joyful, carefree moments, playing and sharing grapes beneath the warmth of the sun. Some are seated on the grass, while others engage in a playful frolic, their lighthearted interaction set against the ornate background of the vine-covered design.
