The subject is a still life depicting a woven basket containing garlic, rendered with meticulous attention to the texture of the wicker and the shape of the bulbs. The tone is quiet and measured, with a palette dominated by beiges, earthy yellows and desaturated greens. The composition is centralized and stable, playing on clear volumes and soft lighting that enhance the physicality of the objects depicted. One senses a contemplative and meditative approach, inviting one to dwell on the silent beauty of the everyday. The work fits into the Italian tradition of the second half of the 20th
