Description

This Tank ring from the 1940s in 750/°° rose gold (18 KT, eagle's head hallmark) and platinum (dog's head hallmark) links several eras. With its structured, geometric lines, its layered arrangement, and its sloping sides, we can still feel the influence of the Art Deco period. Its overall volume, the combination of rose gold and platinum, the harmony in the contrast between the materials and the volumes it presents, allow it to be fully representative of Tank jewelry from the 1940s. Its visual "knot" effect, meanwhile, will be very popular in the 1950s....it is produced by a curved base, all in gold, in response to the central structure adorned with diamonds, which give this ring a perfect balance...All the volumes of the ring being built around the square theme, the center of the ring is adorned with a larger old-cut diamond set in a square base. It is framed by gadroons paved with 8/8 cut diamonds, which give rhythm and structure to the whole, give it volume and bring a touch of roundness and femininity... With its flat volume on the sides, this ring is extremely ergonomic and pleasant to wear despite its beautiful volume. Weight of the central old cut diamond estimated at approximately 0.80 ct Total weight of the 8/8 cut diamonds in paving estimated at approximately 0.20 ct Total weight of diamonds estimated at
