Description

Louis XV style furniture embodies the height of elegance and opulence, perfectly combining functionality and decorative richness. This lady's desk in rosewood veneer and light wood marquetry, dating from the second half of the 19th century, is a shining example of this prestigious style. Rosewood, a precious wood known for its richness of tone and robustness, provides a warm base for this piece. The light wood marquetry adds a delicate contrast, highlighting the refined patterns of the piece. The gilt bronze ingot molds, highlighting each line of the desk, bring an additional touch of luxury. The legs, adorned with bronze falls decorated with acanthus leaves, reflect the antique inspiration so dear to this period. This desk opens with a drop leaf, the interior of which is covered in later black leather. Once opened, it reveals an organized space including four small drawers, perfect for storing personal effects or correspondence. Around the edge, a larger drawer provides additional storage capacity, thus combining beauty and functionality. A piece like this is not just a piece of furniture, but a testament to 19th century art and craftsmanship. Perfect for an interior design with classic charm or for a passionate collector, this Louis XV lady's desk is a treasure that continues to fascinate through the ages. Video:
