Description

Pair of design armchairs by Gastone Rinaldi for RIMA, Italy, 1950s. A model representative of post-war Italian design, featuring a light and elegant lacquered metal wire structure. The circular seat and half-moon shaped backrest create a balanced and comfortable modernist silhouette. This type of furniture reflects the search for lightness and modernity typical of Italian productions of the period. The chairs display a strong graphic presence, characteristic of Rinaldi's creations for the RIMA manufacturer. The seats and backrests have been newly upholstered in red velvet, enhancing the refined black metal structure. These armchairs can easily fit into both modernist interiors and contemporary decorative settings. Attractive decorative presence for a living room, office, or reception
