Description

This charming little piece of furniture embodies all the rustic poetry of 18th-century Sweden, with a strong personality. Its natural wood top, weathered by time, contrasts elegantly with the oxblood-colored faux wood painted base, typical of the Nordic Rococo influence. A central, functional drawer adds a practical touch. The history of the piece can also be seen in its scars: an old repair, with solid exposed metal plates on one jamb, tells the story of its longevity with sincerity. Ideal as a bedside table or end table, it will appeal to lovers of authenticity and unique pieces with a strong character.
