Upon his return to France, he pursued an official career: he received commissions for decorations, notably in Nantes and Paris, won several medals at the Salon and was decorated as a knight (in 1892) and then an officer (in 1923) of the Legion of Honor. A renowned portraitist and decorator, Hippolyte Berteaux began experimenting with landscapes in 1907. He notably produced several series of views of Belle-Île-en-Mer, which he exhibited at the Salon from 1912. From October 31 to November 14, 1919, he was the subject of a solo exhibition at the Galerie Georges Petit, during which, out of 32 issues presented, 21 paintings were devoted to Belle-Île.
