Description

This mahogany daybed with a headboard, dating from the first part of the 19th century, is a magnificent example of Restoration period furniture. The headboard of this daybed features a graceful swan-neck line, typical of the style of the period. This elegant curve adds a touch of sophistication and fluidity to the piece of furniture, making it not only functional, but also aesthetically pleasing. Resting on four finely cut and carved snail-shaped legs, this daybed is a testament to the craftsmanship of the period. These carved legs add an artistic dimension and a unique charm to the piece. Upholstered in a Naples yellow fabric, the daybed comes with two small bolsters and two cushions, providing optimal comfort. The bright color of the fabric contrasts harmoniously with the rich shade of the
