achieved several firsts in the greatest Alpine massifs. He was admitted at the age of 23 as a member of the Italian Alpine Club (CAI) and was also a member of the French Alpine Club (CAF) and the High Mountain Gendarmerie Platoon (PGHM) in Chamonix[1],[2]. At the age of 27, having become an industrial designer[1], he decided, given the success of his first exhibitions, to devote himself entirely to painting. He was a member of the Society of Mountain Painters (SPM) from 1929[2]. He first settled in Courmayeur (Aosta), then in 1933 in Sallanches[1], where he built his own house in 1938, and of which he was named an honorary citizen in 1976[1]. He published his autobiography (original title: L'ultima tela) with Arthaud in 1976[3]. He died on September 10, 1985 in his adopted town[1].
