Description

This bronze, titled "Amour Envoyer des Baisers," was sculpted by Auguste Moreau in the late 19th century. It depicts a young, winged Cupid, often interpreted as Cupid, standing on a circular griotte marble base. The figure is captured in a delicate gesture, her hands near her mouth, as if blowing kisses. The details are meticulously crafted: floral motifs adorn the base, and elegant drapery encircles the figure's waist. The bronze's brown patina highlights the textures and finishes, adding depth and visual richness to the work. This type of sculpture reflects the Romantic style and artistic mastery of Auguste Moreau, famous for his poetic and graceful depictions. Auguste Moreau (1834-1917) was a renowned French sculptor who belonged to the prestigious Moreau family, a sculptural dynasty of the 19th and early
