The photo frames of these so-called Scottish "transfer" items are quite rare, it must be said, and coming from a coastal town like Gijon in Spain, it is truly rare. These charming little items, often for the office or for sewing, were made in the small Scottish town of Mauchline, then dedicated to this industry of "Souvenir" items for tourist shops in Europe, allowing an image to be affixed with the name of the town and then sold as real souvenirs.
