Félix Bracquemond", February-July 1897, no. 104 Good general condition Framed, under glass Dimensions with frame: 55 x 42 cm *  When one of the most talented engravers of 19th century in France works on the interpretation of a pastel by Jean-François Millet, the result is a print remarkable as much for the clarity of the line as for its fidelity to the spirit and the realistic aesthetic. As we research to situate this work both in its time and in the career of its author, we find information that completes this study in the finest museum institutions: the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston holds Millet's original pastel, the British Museum holds the only other known proof of the first state, and the Fondation Custodia sheds light on our research on the eminent collector that was Alfred Barrion. This is one of the very rare impressions of the 1st state of the engraving. The only other known impression of the 1st state, kept at the British Museum, was acquired immediately by Campbell Dodgson (1867-1948, Curator of Prints at the BM), in 1927, from the artist's son, Pierre Bracquemond. Here is a link to the complete museum entry : https://www.britishmuseum.org/collection/object/ P_1927-0312-124 The print presented here has not been restored over time, it retains a beautiful overall freshness. A light restoration will be enough to see again its brilliance and to reveal with precision the contrasts intended and accomplished by the engraver. Félix Bracquemond edited only a very small number of prints of his 1st states. While the British Museum likely holds the artist's proof from the studio, our print, bearing Bracquemond's signature in pen, was certainly intended for sale, and we can imagine that it entered Alfred Barrion's collection very soon after its creation, as this collector was always on the lookout for the rarest prints. Several additional research materials are available if you would like to discuss this print further.
