Hozon Kyokai (the Society for the Preservation of the Sword Japanese Art Museum), is one of the oldest Japanese sword appraisal organizations in modern Japan. Dimensions: 105 x 8 x 8 cm. Edge length: 69.8 cm. Curvature: 1.51 cm. Notes: The first-generation Kanetoshi is said to be an apprentice of Kaneuji, also known as Shizu Saburo Kanuji (?????), who laid the province's foundation for prosperity as one of the most famous swordsmithing sites, along with Kinju, one of the most renowned swordsmiths in Mino Province. At the end of the Kamakura period (early 14th century), Kaneuji moved from Yamato Province (present-day Nara Prefecture) to Shizu Village in Mino Province and founded the Naoe School, one of the most prestigious schools in that region. He is known as one of the Masamune Jittesu, one of the ten apprentices of Masamune, one of the most famous swordsmiths in Japanese history.
