Unframed Teresa Bézard-Pérate was an artist active between the 19th and 20th centuries. She is known for participating in the Salon des Femmes Peintres et Sculpteurs, an important exhibition that highlighted the works of women artists at a time when they were often marginalized. This salon played a crucial role in providing a platform for women to exhibit their works and gain recognition. There is currently a growing interest in 19th-century women painters. Several recent exhibitions and publications highlight their work and their contribution to art history.
