Description

African beaded sculptures are among the most famous African productions. They come from the region controlled by the Bamiléké and more particularly from the Sultanate of Bamun (Foumban Region, in Western Cameroon)

Sculpted from a wooden core, they are then covered with a raffia fabric and then a lattice of colored beads and cowrie shells (small shell that once served as currency) COLLECTION OF DOCTOR REDOR. height: 40cm If there is one term that fits Jean Redor like a glove, it is that of passionate. The years have changed nothing. This man has always lived for and with art. "Without it, I would be dead", "I was introduced by my mother, who had a taste for beautiful objects". His criteria? Love at first sight and authenticity. A collector since he was 18, Jean Redor has
