Description

French School circa 1680-1700, Country Life, Oil on Wood

This painting, of remarkable execution quality, is characteristic of a new style at the end of the 17th century. This period is marked by a transition towards scenes of daily life and landscapes, in addition to traditional religious or mythological themes. Scenes of country life became popular and often reflected the daily activities of people in rural areas.

The artwork, an oil on wood, depicts a lively landscape with characters engaged in various tasks in the French countryside of the late 17th century.
