Description

A unique piece of spirituality and tradition, this authentic Nepalese shamanic mask is made from yak leather.
This extraordinary object represents the craftsmanship and symbolism deeply rooted in the shamanic culture of the Himalayan regions.
Traditionally, the process begins with carving the wood into the desired shape, which is then rubbed with yak butter. The yak leather is placed over it and the entire piece is heated over a fire to imprint the form into the leather.
In Nepal, the shaman plays an important role in society. He wears this mask while channeling spirits, allowing him to attract benevolent ones and repel malevolent entities.
These "good" spirits help heal illnesses and guide villagers through major life transitions, such as
