Description

Gas lamp in glass, gilt bronze and enameled porcelain. 19th century A pedestal with rocailles and medallions serves as a base for the porcelain vase decorated with roses that serves as the body of the lamp, with two metal handles. The upper part contains the key to control the gas outlet, and the flame is protected by a glass cylinder surrounded by a pink cut glass flower. Without forgetting the functionality of these works, time and effort were devoted to the decorative part, as it is a lamp intended for an important interior. -
