Description

Louis-Charles Pinet de Gaulade (1920-2010) was a multi-talented Belgian artist. He expressed himself through painting, sculpture, illustration, and tapestry. Born in Belgium, he studied at the Beaux-Arts in Brussels and enriched his training with study visits to various European museums, including the Prado, the Louvre, and museums in the Netherlands and Italy. His work is diverse, ranging from figurative creations to abstract compositions. As a visual artist, he explored materials with an approach similar to painting. His skill in drawing allowed him to conceive abstract forms where figurative elements could be integrated into complex and controlled arrangements. He is particularly recognized for his tapestries, often described as "smoothed-ornate", which demonstrate his sense
