Description

> Description "Mañana de Verano" (Summer Morning), painted in 1947 by Catalan artist Ramon Trulls Pons, invites you into the tranquil charm of Caserras, a quiet village nestled in the Spanish countryside. This evocative oil on canvas depicts a sun-drenched street where villagers and a donkey pass through soft light and dusty air. What distinguishes this work is Trulls Pons' masterful use of color. He moves beyond realism, layering earthy ochres and terracotta with celadon greens, muted violets, and lavender-grey shadows. These unexpected hues bring emotional richness and a lyrical, dreamlike quality to the composition. His brushwork is confident yet sensitive, echoing the post-impressionist tradition while anchoring the work in regional authenticity. Presented in its original carved

Trulls Pons was a mid-20th-century Catalan painter whose work captures the atmosphere of rural Spanish life with expressive light and color.

His style reflects the influence of Catalonia's plein-air traditions and the emotional depth of post-impressionist masters. While his work remains relatively undiscovered internationally, it is increasingly appreciated by collectors of Mediterranean art and Spanish regionalism.NO
