Description

A rare and captivating double-sided oil painting on panel, signed by Ettore Bocchini (1899-1970), an Italian painter active in the Romagna region. The signature is visible on the lower right of the front side.

The artwork features two distinct landscapes, painted on both sides of the panel. The front depicts a winding road lined with houses and lush hillside vegetation, likely inspired by the Tuscan-Romagnol countryside. The reverse shows a more open scene, with tall trees, rustic buildings, and a diffused light that creates a quiet, contemplative atmosphere.

The brushwork is bold and assured, and the warm, natural palette reveals the artist's personal and sensitive interpretation of the landscape. A gilded frame enhances the overall elegance of the

Artist's Biography

Ettore Bocchini was born in Cesena in 1899 and died in Ravenna in 1970. Active throughout the 20th century, he worked primarily in the Emilia-Romagna region. His painting is characterized by a deep attention to the rural and hilly landscapes of the Tuscan-Romagnol Apennines, portrayed with rich textures, warm tones, and a strong sense of atmosphere. Appreciated locally, Bocchini left behind a body of work that reflects a balanced, figurative style rooted in his native land.
