Description

Two-seater sofa designed by Isamu Kenmochi, circa late 1960s. This sofa embodies the elegance of modernist Japanese design. Its bentwood frame draws a continuous line between the armrests and the base, creating a fluid and balanced silhouette. The generous seat, padded and covered in a textured green fabric, offers both comfort and sobriety. Isamu Kenmochi revisits here the traditional forms of Japanese seating in a contemporary language, typical of the 60s and 70s. Perfect in combination with the pair of armchairs for a complete living room.
Manufacturer: Akita Mokko, circa 1965 Origin: Hotel in Hokkaido, Japan
