Description

oil on canvas 120 x 96, "umbrella pine" Pascal Amblard, landscape painter, he mainly paints the Alps, Provence, the United States ... he begins with a period largely devoted to teaching painting in Paris. At the time when the school in which he intervenes, reaches an international reputation, he decides to take a new direction. Quickly he specializes in a style inspired by the old masters, going from the Renaissance to the XVIIIth. He sells on the five continents, he is invited to exercise his talents as a teacher in the United States, Sweden, Italy and Belgium ... This long journey of self-taught, this frequentation of the masters of the past was his apprenticeship. At the end of this approach walk, there is the patiently nourished desire, to paint the mountains and their astonishing beauty. He practices a direct
