Description

Coffee table designed by Isamu Kenmochi, circa 1965. The curved wooden structure, connected by a central brace, supports a white melamine top, with a subtle and elegant contrast. The fluid and clean lines of this piece reflect the influence of Japanese modernism and demonstrate Kenmochi's formal mastery. Conceived as a natural extension of the sofa and armchairs in the same set, this table perfectly embodies the designer's approach: a contemporary reinterpretation of traditional Japanese forms, combining functionality, simplicity, and refinement. Manufacturer: Akita Mokko, circa 1965.
