Sold with invoice-certificate. Good condition. Jean Fous, born April 9, 1901 in Paris and died May 29, 1971 in L'Union near Toulouse, is a French naive painter. The young Jean Fous learned the trade of his father, a frame maker, but did not continue for long in this field. After various trades and a long stay in the South, he returned to Paris, in the Saint-Sulpice district. Under the influence of Anatole Jakovsky, whom he met in 1943, he began to paint by taking a subject that he knew intimately, the Parisian flea markets. He exhibited for the first time in 1944 about twenty paintings on this theme. In the autumn of 1970, shortly
