Description

Folding Kodak N4 Hawk-Eye Model 1 In 1899, Kodak acquired the Blair Camera Co., which remained independent until 1907. From 1908, Blair became a division of the Eastman Kodak Company. Along with other small companies acquired by Kodak, they were grouped together in a single building in Rochester, named Hawk-Eye Works. The camera body is made of wood and aluminum covered in grained leather, with nickel-plated metal parts. link on our website
