Description

Louis XVI game table, French manufacture, 1860 (approximately) in pink wood, rosewood, with particular workmanship and inlay, the upper surface rotates to allow the four flaps to be opened and make it become a game table, the four flaps to be noted on the edges are all covered with wood placed on the head (particular workmanship that was carried out in fine furniture). The table also has a drawer with herringbone inlays, like the other sides. The piece of furniture has been restored in our laboratory, and has returned to its original beauty, the internal cloth has been replaced with a new one.
