Vintage 18k White Gold Flower-shaped Ring With Natural Diamonds

1 150 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Gold

Description

This vintage ring features a floral design full of movement and sparkle. It's crafted in 18K white gold and set with 19 natural diamonds, including one of about 2 mm right at the center of the flower. The rest are arranged across the petals, giving it a soft and continuous shine.The shape resembles an open flower, worked in volume. You can tell it's well made: the details are sharp, the open spaces between petals give it lightness, and the polished finish brings everything together. It's a design that stands out without being too much. It has personality, but it's easy to wear.Based on its style and craftsmanship, it likely dates from the 1980s, a time when natural motifs became popular again in fine jewelry. Floral pieces were especially appreciated, and many jewelers aimed to create bold yet elegant
