Description

Pitcher. Silver. Madrid, 1847. With contrasting marks. Silver pitcher of the same color, with a flat handle decorated with simple openwork plant elements between two smooth bands and a raised shape towards the top, a large mouth that extends forward, and a body with different lines and decorations organized into three registers, and a circular foot with a band of architectural motifs. These three registers are organized: a smooth area towards the top, followed by a fluted section and another ribbed one. The decoration and lines of the jug show a clear classical influence. It bears the engraved initials of its owner (FAL). The hallmarks are those of Villa y Corte de Madrid (which also indicate the date) and that of the goldsmith Juan Sellán, trained at the Real Fábrica de Platerías de Martínez in 1821 and incorporated
