Description

This fine late 19th-century Victorian mahogany hall stand is a charming and practical piece, perfect for storing umbrellas and walking sticks. Its elegant design and excellent condition makes it a delightful addition to any hallway or entryway. The stand features a twelve-segment top supported by ring-turned baluster columns capped with turned finials, creating a visually appealing silhouette. The base includes a removable tin drip tray for easy cleaning. Raised on turned feet, the stand is both stable and aesthetically pleasing. Its rich mahogany color and original condition further enhance its appeal. Dating from around 1890, this piece perfectly captures the style and craftsmanship of the Victorian era in England.
