Description

Manuel Rufi Gibert's mixed media abstract composition masterfully balances geometric rigor and visual depth, presenting a vertically aligned panel of interlocking shapes rendered in moody ochres, charcoal blacks, stormy blues, and pale neutrals. The textured surface draws the viewer into a layered interplay of color and form, with sharply defined angles that suggest a quiet architectural tension. The painting evokes a contemplative rhythm through its careful modulation of tone and contrast, each plane contributing to a dynamic yet harmonious whole. This work is emblematic of the Spanish Constructivist movement of the late 20th century, merging the precision of Concrete Art with a poetic restraint. The subdued palette and formal clarity make it a compelling visual anchor in
