Description

Through an open window, bathed in light, a striking view of the port of La Rochelle opens up. The two famous medieval towers frame the entrance to the old port, majestic and steeped in history. The sky is animated by the graceful flight of white gulls, their wings spread in full motion, capturing the momentum of the sea breeze. In the foreground, the windowsill hints at some intimate details, the curtain fluttering slightly, suggesting a discreet human presence. The salty air seems almost palpable, and the calm of the scene is punctuated by the light bustle of the port and the moored sailboats. The composition of the painting harmoniously blends interior and exterior, daily life and maritime grandeur, offering a scene that is both peaceful and lively.
