Description

Pair of portraits, woman and man painted in a painting medallion, the woman is richly dressed in an evening dress with lace, embroidery and jewels, hair styled in the Fontange style while the man is dressed in a simple velvet dressing gown but he still has a wig. On the back we can see the surnames of the characters represented as well as the date 1715. It would seem perhaps that the function of the male character would be "Protestant pastor" as indicated on the back of the canvas. Paintings on their original canvases on which old restorations have been carried out. Frame from a later period probably from the Louis XVI period.
