The combination of the woman, decorated with gold accents such as bracelets, and the leaping goat suggests a scene with erotic connotations. The goat traditionally symbolizes virility, boundless desire, or the devil. The figurine is inscribed "Jan Roser Déposé" on the side, indicating a registered design with a trademark. Art Deco 1915-1935 A hole in the back of her dress shows that this piece was once used as a perfume lamp. The perfume was placed in an opening on the goat's head.
