Description

Bronze with black patina signed by the sculptor Victor Rousseau (1865 - 1954). Of Belgian origin, he carved stones from a young age and then participated in the construction of the colossal courthouse in Brussels. Through his various travels, Victor Rousseau was inspired by Art Nouveau in France and the Renaissance style in Italy. This sculpture represents a man tenderly holding a child in his arms and feeding the latter. He holds a spoon high and a bowl. He wears a hat, period clothing and clogs. Sitting on a rock, he is accompanied by a faithful dog at his side. The work exudes a warm and intimate atmosphere, capturing a moment of tenderness, emblematic of the beginnings of life. The artist's signature is present on the terrace. The sculpture rests on an elegant griotte marble base. This
