Description

Oil on canvas. Original canvas. The Montbaron gallery offers its distinguished clientele this sublime pair of Antwerp flowers from the mid-18th century, which embodies the aesthetic and decorative feeling of Northern European still life. Going beyond the excesses of the most exuberant and ornamental Baroque, the artist preserves the powerful symbolism of the animals present in each of the two oils, giving them a central place in each composition. The red papaya and the macaque, supposedly magical creatures from exotic and unknown lands, combine their extraordinary and unusual appearances with the beauty of the magnificent flowers. A sense of distant ostentation mingles with the darkness that surrounded each subject, creating an aura of mystery and mystery. The mastery of the painting
