Description

Interesting twisted and worked opalescent glass vase, taking up the spirit of the lacrimoire vases. Beautiful work of blown glasswork with a three-branched twist at the body and emerging on a wide neck with three spouts forming a corolla. The pot-bellied base is marked with thicker threads in the mass and rests on a pinched collar with bubbles and small openwork places. The thicker threads of the glass form like extra thicknesses but there are no cracks. The whole is in good condition. The opalescent color between milky white and pale blue gives this vase irresistible reflections which give beautiful contrasts to the light. It takes up the spirit and the shape of the older lacrimoire vases in the Orient etc ... even if it is a work of the 19th century. A beautiful collector's glassware. Dimensions: 23
