his engraved work earned him several medals.

The British scholar Philip Gilbert Hamerton asked him to collaborate on several of his books on the art of engraving: Chapters on Animals (1874) with Karl Bodmer, Etching and Etchers (1880), and a third edition with contributions from other artists. He received a medal for his painting in 1872. Veyrassat was named a Knight of the Legion of Honor in 1878. He is one of the most awarded painters and engravers for his work on nature. He was attached to the school of Écouen, a town where he had a room, and attended classes with Pierre-Édouard Frère, with whom he became friends. It was Pierre-Édouard Frère and Charles-François Daubigny who encouraged him to practice etching. He produced four engravings, among others, for the album L'Eau forte en... (1874-1881) published by Cadart. He was also associated with the Barbizon school. His work is close to that of Charles Jacque or Jean-François Millet, whom he knew well. In a realistic register, he based his work on the observation of rural life in rural France at the time. His subjects address the themes of breeding and the work of horses in agricultural life. He never left his home country, but his fame spread throughout Europe. Jules Jacques Veyrassat died on July 2, 1893 in the 9th arrondissement of Paris and is buried in the Père-Lachaise cemetery (44th division).
