Description

From E. R. Hughes, "Oh, What's That in the Hollow ?" Early 1900s, pastel on paper, signed
This pastel on cardboard painting depicts the famous subject of painter Hughes entitled "Oh, What's That in the Hollow ?" pastel on cardboard technique.
Style: Symbolism / Pre-Raphaelite Influences
The painting depicts a young woman lying on the ground in a dense and symbolic composition, immersed in a dark wooded landscape full of evocative details. The figure's face, partially surrounded by branches, flowers and foliage, is illuminated by a soft light that emphasizes her melancholy and contemplative expression. Flying above her are two yellow butterflies, symbols often associated with transformation, soul or rebirth, while in the background are black ravens, which may suggest
