Description

Alfred Franck de PRADES. (Lunel 1825- London 1885). Equestrian portrait depicting a racehorse, a thoroughbred stallion (unidentified) ridden by a jockey "Fred Webb", signed lower right A. F De Prades. 19th century, size 65 x 81 cm. Relined edges and minor restorations. Alfred Frank de Prades, born Anacharsis François Prestreau in Lunel (Hérault) on March 24, 1825 and died in London on July 7, 1885, was a French painter and engraver, active in Great Britain. Well known in the United Kingdom during his lifetime for his equestrian paintings and military subjects in a style close to that of George Stubbs (1724-1806), his canvases, appreciated by the English sporting nobility of the 19th century, made him successful from around 1850 until his death in 1885. Equestrian and military subjects made Alfred
