without "Denmark" (used before 1923);

- the model number 1083 painted in green;

- the painter's number 110 in cobalt blue;

- the factory's iconic three wavy blue lines;

- and the number 1083 N incised into the porcelain body, confirming the registered shape.

Painter no. 110 was active at the Royal Copenhagen factory in the first decade of the 20th century, according to the numbering system in use between 1893 and the late 1920s. The fine decoration and presence of four small glazed feet--unusual for standard production--suggest this was a special commission, possibly reserved for figures connected to the publishing world.

The occasion's public significance is confirmed by a 1909 commemorative plate created the same year by Bing & Grøndahl and signed by Harald Moltke.

Condition: excellent. No chips, cracks or restorations. Crisp detail and glossy glaze.

Dimensions: height 15.5 cm, width 12 cm
