Description

This impressive leather-covered horse sculpture, attributed to Liberty & Co of London circa 1930s, showcases exquisite craftsmanship and attention to detail. Stamped with "LIBERTY & CO LONDON" on the underside, it features some restorations and later support, yet remains sturdy and in nice original condition. This is the larger and rarer size for such pieces, making it a standout item in any collection. The horse exhibits a beautiful brown leather finish, enhanced by glass eyes that add a lifelike quality. Its lovely aged patina tells a story of its history while still maintaining elegance. The sculpture is well-proportioned with intricate details, making it a perfect talking point for any equestrian enthusiast. There is slight wear consistent with age and use, but this only adds to its charm and
