Description

The sofa is an elegant creation of Tuscan workmanship, belonging to the Louis XV period, dated around 1750 (mid-18th century). Made of carved and gilded wood, it features everted side backrests that give a touch of refinement to its design. The sofa does not have a central backrest, but comfort is ensured by its padded seat. The legs of the sofa are arched, which give it a light and sinuous appearance. On the seat, however, you can observe decorative details inspired by nature, with phytomorphic motifs and spirals that chase each other creating an elegant weave of floral elements. These carvings, rich in precision and craftsmanship, give the sofa a certain character and charm. Overall, this refined carved and gilded wooden sofa represents a remarkable example of the furniture art of the Louis XV
