Description

Dating from the middle of the 19th century, this convex mirror, known as a witch mirror, is set in a gilded brass frame suggesting a ship's porthole, using the famous rivets as decoration. There are many legends surrounding this type of mirror, which was often said to have magical powers. Its origins date back to the 15th century, and its convex effect provides a wide-angle reflection that allowed one to monitor potential thieves or intruders.
