Description

This Restoration period mahogany desk chair rests on curved front and saber-shaped rear legs, contributing to a robust and elegant appearance. This chair features a curved upper back with carved floral motifs in the center, typical of the ornamental design of the Restoration style. The crooked armrests rest on generously carved scrolled consoles that connect to the seat. The seat, made in the traditional way, and the back are upholstered in a champagne-colored diamond-patterned fabric offering a subtle contrast with the color of the wood. This type of chair, interesting for its historical value and its craftsmanship that reflects the aesthetics of its time, will seduce with its size, especially the height of its seat.  Period: Early 19th century Excellent condition. Waxed finish
